LOVE AND CAKE

Hana is interested in only two things—eating and sleeping. But when a pastry shop opens in Hana's neighborhood and she gets a part-time job there, people begin to wonder: Does she love sweets, or the shop's gorgeous chef? When the chef asks Hana to go with him to France, it's the icing on the cake.

Shanghai Zoo Part 2!! Here we have the wolf, Hogeo-kun.
It looks like he's just a head, but he actually does have a body, too.
Princess Tenko is ghastly pale, too. This is Princess Hogeo. Oh, I guess he's a prince. I made him a girl. Sorry, Hogeo. —Ai Morinaga

Honorifics Explained

Throughout the Del Rey Manga books, you will find Japanese honorifics left intact in the translations. For those not familiar with how the Japanese use honorifics and, more important, how they differ from American honorifics, we present this brief overview.

Politeness has always been a critical facet of Japanese culture. Ever since the feudal era, when Japan was a highly stratified society, use of honorifics—which can be defined as polite speech that indicates relationship or status—has played an essential role in the Japanese language. When addressing someone in Japanese, an honorific usually takes the form of a suffix attached to one's name (example: "Asuna-san"), is used as a title at the end of one's name, or appears in place of the name itself (example: "Negi-sensei," or simply "Sensei!").

Honorifics can be expressions of respect or endearment. In the context of manga and anime, honorifics give insight into the nature of the relationship between characters. Many English translations leave out these important honorifics and therefore distort the feel of the original Japanese. Because Japanese honorifics contain nuances that English honorifics lack, it is our policy at Del Rey not to translate them. Here, instead, is a guide to some of the honorifics you may encounter in Del Rey Manga.

-san: This is the most common honorific and is equivalent to Mr., Miss, Ms., or Mrs. It is the all-purpose honorific and can be used in any situation where politeness is required.

-sama: This is one level higher than "-san" and is used to confer great respect.

-dono: This comes from the word "tono," which means "lord." It is an even higher level than "-sama" and confers utmost respect.

-kun: This suffix is used at the end of boys' names to express familiarity or endearment. It is also sometimes used by men among friends, or when addressing someone younger or of a lower station.

-chan: This is used to express endearment, mostly toward girls. It is also used for little boys, pets, and even among lovers. It gives a sense of childish cuteness.

Bozu: This is an informal way to refer to a boy, similar to the English terms "kid" and "squirt."

Sempai/Senpai: This title suggests that the addressee is one's senior in a group or organization. It is most often used in a school setting, where underclassmen refer to their upperclassmen as "sempai." It can also be used in the workplace, such as when a newer employee addresses an employee who has seniority in the company.

Kohai: This is the opposite of "sempai" and is used toward underclassmen in school or newcomers in the workplace. It connotes that the addressee is of a lower station.

Sensei: Literally meaning "one who has come before," this title is used for teachers, doctors, or masters of any profession or art.

-[blank]: This is usually forgotten in these lists, but it is perhaps the most significant difference between Japanese and English. The lack of honorific means that the speaker has permission to address the person in a very intimate way. Usually, only family, spouses, or very close friends have this kind of permission. Known as yobisute, it can be gratifying when someone who has earned the intimacy starts to call one by one's name without an honorific. But when that intimacy hasn't been earned, it can be very insulting.

Was Shizuoka always this far away?
Sensei, are we there yet?
We won't make it in time to play.
Seriously, these days you should at least rent a car with GPS.
Heh.
Leave everything to me!
We have no need for such vulgar gewgaws!
Look forward, forward, forward!

Oh, pardon me, pardon me.
We couldn't just lock Seimei up in a pet carrier for such a long time, poor thing.
I knew we should have taken the shinkansen...
But Takashi is the one taking care of him!
Now, Wacky!!
WHAP
Aww! But pets are a part of the family.
Then leave him at home!

You again!? What are you doing here!?
I should be asking you!!
We have an away game in Shizuoka.
What about you? Why are you everywhere we go...?
Shizuoka?
What are you talking about? We're in Aichi Prefecture.

Eeeeehhh!?
Sensei! Hey! We passed Shizuoka!
That's strange. We should have been driving through Shimizu until just a little while ago.
Then we make a U-turn! Get in, everyone!
I'm done with this. Everyone, unload your bags!
We'll get another car.
We won't make it in time for the match.
We're cancelling for today!
We'll have some misokatsu in Nagoya and go home.
PERK
Nagoya, huh? Some chicken wings would be nice, too.
And unagi!
Tenmusu, tenmusu!

Heh heh heh.
I was watching a TV special on Nagoya Cochin, and it gave me the biggest craving for chicken wings.
It's the pick-up bus for our company's holiday resort.
This car yours?
Y... yes.

Since they have animals with them, it will be hard for them to find a hotel now.
Brother, if they'd like, why not let them stay at the resort?
I thought I told you he's not "Stomach Pillow"!!
No, not at all.
Unlike your brother...
You're a good man.
Mm-hm.
I can finally sleep. Zzzzzz.
Come on, I'm almost done.

It's not that we can't. It's that we don't.
Normally, there's no need.
J... just a minute! What are you thinking? You can't do anything!
Got it, guys!?
And so, for the present, the hockey club will be the pastry shop club!
Oohh, we have a part-time job.
I knew it.
Hey, Izumi...
It's okay. It's for club, so we don't need pay!
I can't pay more employees, and, um, I might have more workers than customers.
Um, but it's a small shop, so I have enough help already...
I get all the leftover cake, okay!?

See? Just like I told you.
You should have faith in yourself.
...what'll I do? I...
Feel really good.
Having someone tell me they like me...
JIIIIN
Mahiru...!
Th-then...
Do you like me, too...?
Thank you,
Sôta

Huh?
GAH
Thanks to you, I have faith in myself!
I'll at least accept your feelings!

Well, I have always thought that I might be a little cute~~
CHUCKLE
CHUCKLE
Like that?
So what is this~~? Maybe I'm not so bad after all?

Ideals really do have to be high.
It's okay.
But I have a goal now.
I'm sorry, Sôta.
I'm sorry I thought you were a girl, Natsuki-chan.

I'll work hard to be so cute that Natsuki-chan will tell me he likes me!!
Hn!
CHILL
...I'm kind of cold somehow, so let's go get something warm to eat, okay?
But I'm big-boned, so maybe I'll be more pretty than cute.
I wonder which is Natsuki-chan's type.
Let's go, let's go.
♡
I like ikayaki.
You saw my chest, so you're treating, okay, Natsuki-chan.
♡ ♡
But you touched mine, Mahiru-chan.
.....
Then I guess we're even.
The End

Translation Notes

Japanese is a tricky language for most Westerners, and translation is often more art than science. For your edification and reading pleasure, here are notes on some of the places where we could have gone in a different direction with our translation of the work, or where a Japanese cultural reference is used.

Shizuoka, page 5

Shizuoka is the capital of Shizuoka Prefecture, a prefecture in central Japan, not far from Tokyo.

The shinkansen is the bullet train.

Aichi Prefecture, page 10

Another prefecture in Japan, on the other side of Shizuoka from Tokyo.

Misokatsu, unagi, tenmusu, and ebi-fry page 11

All of these are local dishes of Nagoya, the capital city of Aichi Prefecture. Misokatsu, or miso cutlets, consists of pork cutlets with a red miso sauce. Unagi, or eel, is big in Aichi, and has been cooked into a wide variety of dishes. Tenmusu, short for tempura musubi, is a rice ball with shrimp tempura, and ebi-fry is fried shrimp.

Nagoya Cochin, page 12

A special breed of chicken found in Nagoya, and used in making Nagoya's many famous chicken dishes.

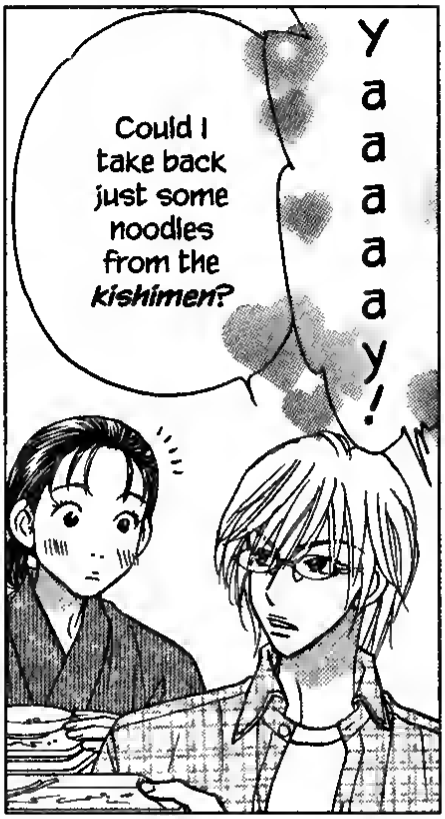
The noodle specialty of Nagoya, kishimen is a flat, brown noodle often served with miso.



Kaeru manjû, page 37

Kaeru means frog, so a kaeru manjû is a steamed yeast bun shaped like a frog. It's a type of sweet you can buy in Nagoya.

Happiness fat, page 41

In Japan, this is what they call it when a man gains weight after getting married. The idea is that the man is happily eating his new wife's delicious food so much that he gets fat.

Moé, page 66

Moé is a phrase used by fanboys and fangirls to describe the type of character from an anime or video game that they have a particular attraction to, and the strong feelings that those characters inspire.

Water bath, page 108

A water bath, or yuɜen in Japanese, is a way to cook something by putting a container holding the ingredients in warm or boiling water. Water baths are used to cook things that need careful temperature regulation, like chocolate and eggs, because the water serves as a buffer to prevent the ingredients from getting too hot too quickly.

Sembei, page 110

Sembei are Japanese rice crackers, known for being flat, quite the opposite of spongecake.

Takashi x Izumi, page 127

The line is said by a character from an earlier volume, who's obsessed with a genre of manga called yaoi. It's kind of like slash fiction in the U.S.—stories of homosexual relationships between male characters written for the enjoyment of a female readership. Just as writers of slash fiction denote the characters that are the subject of the relationship using a "slash" between their names—Kirk/Spock, Frodo/Sam—yaoi fans sometimes use an "x" for the same purpose, as in "Takashi x Izumi." This character is enjoying the idea of Izumi and the baker or Izumi and Takashi having a relationship.

Seiken chûdan gyakuzuki and oɜu, page 128

Seiken means "correct fist," and is a normal fist with the thumb outside the rest of the fingers. Chûdan means "middle level," and refers to a strike to the middle level, or the body/torso, and gyakuzuki is a "reverse strike." So the instructor is telling his students to do a reverse punch at body level using a ɜeiken fist. Oɜu, in this case, means "yes, sir!"

Jôdan, page 131

Referencing Mahiru's attack on Sôta, Mahiru's grandfather is impressed with her jôdan kick. Jôdan means "higher level," and in karate refers to a strike to the head.

Chocolate monaka, page 140

A monaka is a wafer cake with filling. In this case, he's buying a chocolate monaka, which is kind of like an ice cream sandwich. In the center is a layer of chocolate, surrounded by ice cream, all contained in a waffle-like wafer.

Matsuri, page 144

A matsuri is a Japanese festival. There are food, games, and entertainment, like a fair, only without rides. Everyone dresses up in Japanese-style clothing.

Yukata, page 145

A yukata is a summer kimono, made of cotton and less formal than a normal kimono. Like a kimono, a yukata is tied with a belt called an obi, which, for girls, is wide and tied in a special, decorative way, and is a little more restrictive than the obi men wear. Girls like to show off how they look in yukata when they go to a matsuri.

Jinbei, page 145

Jinbei is informal summer clothing for men, consisting of a short coat and pants that go to the knees.

Geta, page 153

Geta is a type of Japanese shoe worn with yukata, kind of like flip-flops, only made of wood and standing on two wooden slats called "teeth." Since Mahiru is prone to kicking boys, they would certainly want to avoid her when she's wearing such potentially painful footwear.

Takoyaki and goldfish scoop, page 153

Both are musts for summer matsuri. Takoyaki is fried octopus, formed in balls and put on a skewer. The goldfish scoop is a game where you catch goldfish with paper nets.

Ikayaki, page 170

Fried squid.

Princess Tenko, author's note

Princess Tenko is a famous Japanese magician and illusionist, and even she would be shocked and amazed at Hogeo-kun's ability to look like just a head.
